01 · Agenda Introduction 0:00–2:00

CD · INTRODUCE THE TOPIC

"Thank you, delegates.

We shall now move towards the introduction of our committee agenda.

The agenda assigned to the United Nations General Assembly at IBAD-MUN 2026 is:

'Strengthening Global Action and International Cooperation to Combat Climate Change.'

This agenda focuses on one of the most important international challenges of our time: climate change.

Climate change is not an issue that affects only one country or one region. Its consequences extend across national borders and require cooperation between governments and international institutions.

Different countries experience different environmental challenges. Some face rising temperatures, others experience floods, droughts, water shortages, extreme weather conditions, and threats to agriculture and biodiversity.

However, addressing these challenges requires more than individual national efforts. It requires international cooperation, collective responsibility, effective policies, and practical solutions."

02 · Understanding the Agenda 2:00–4:00

CD · FRAME THE DEBATE

"Distinguished delegates,

As representatives of your respective countries, you are expected to approach this agenda from your country's national perspective.

Consider the following questions during your preparation and debate:

1. What environmental and climate-related challenges does your country face?
2. What policies has your country adopted to address climate change?
3. How can developed and developing countries cooperate more effectively?
4. What role should international organizations play in supporting climate action?
5. How can countries encourage sustainable development while protecting their economies?
6. What practical international measures can be proposed to strengthen climate cooperation?

I encourage you to focus on realistic, achievable, and internationally cooperative solutions.

Remember that every country has different economic circumstances, resources, priorities, and responsibilities.

Your objective should be to defend your country's position while remaining open to diplomatic negotiation and cooperation."

03 · Committee Rules and Conduct 4:00–7:00

CD · ESTABLISH EXPECTATIONS

"Before we begin the formal debate, I would like to establish some important expectations regarding committee conduct.

First: Diplomatic decorum. All delegates must maintain respectful and diplomatic language throughout the session. Personal remarks, insults, unnecessary interruptions, and disrespectful behaviour will not be entertained.

Second: Representation. Every delegate must speak and act as the representative of their assigned country. You are expected to defend your country's policies, interests, and international position rather than simply expressing personal opinions.

Third: Recognition by the Chair. Delegates must wait to be recognised by the Chair before delivering formal speeches or addressing the committee. Please raise your placard when you wish to be recognised.

Fourth: Active participation. All delegates are encouraged to participate in formal debate, moderated caucuses, unmoderated caucuses, negotiations, and resolution drafting.

Fifth: Respect for time. Delegates must respect the speaking time allocated by the Chair. Please conclude your remarks when your allotted time expires.

Sixth: Cooperation. The purpose of this committee is to encourage meaningful debate and international cooperation. Delegates should be willing to negotiate, exchange ideas, and work towards common solutions.

The Executive Board will ensure that proceedings remain fair, orderly, and productive."

04 · Language Policy 7:00–9:00

CD · CLARIFY PARTICIPATION LANGUAGES

"Delegates, I would also like to clarify the official language policy of IBAD-MUN 2026.

According to the conference guidelines, the United Nations General Assembly is a bilingual committee.

This means delegates are permitted to deliver their speeches and participate in caucuses in either English or Urdu, or a combination of both.

Official working papers may also be submitted in English or Urdu script.

The purpose of this policy is to ensure that every delegate can express their ideas confidently.

We value the substance of your arguments, diplomatic decorum, and critical reasoning over linguistic fluency.

Therefore, do not hesitate to participate simply because you are not completely comfortable speaking in one language.

However, all delegates are expected to maintain professionalism and ensure that their arguments are understandable to the committee."

05 · Final Instructions & Transition 9:00–10:00

CD

"Before we begin our debate, I would like every delegate to keep three things in mind:

1. Represent your country, not your personal opinion.
2. Focus on solutions rather than simply identifying problems.
3. Cooperate with other delegations while protecting your country's interests.

The Executive Board expects constructive participation from all 45 delegations.

If you have a procedural question, you may raise your placard and seek recognition from the Chair.

The Executive Board will guide you throughout the proceedings.

With that, the agenda has been introduced, and the committee rules and language policy have been clarified.

We shall now proceed with the scheduled committee proceedings.

Thank you, distinguished delegates."

Executive Board: Procedural Notes

The IBAD-MUN agenda document confirms the following:

- UNGA has 45 delegates.
- UNGA has two Executive Board members.
- English and Urdu are permitted in speeches and caucuses.
- Working papers may be submitted in English or Urdu script.
- The agenda concerns international climate action and cooperation.

> Important: The conference document does not specify detailed Rules of Procedure for motions, points, speaking-time limits, quorum, voting thresholds, or amendment procedures. Do not announce specific requirements as official conference rules unless confirmed by the Secretariat or official Rules of Procedure. Use the conference's approved procedural rules when handling motions, points, debate, amendments, and voting.

Final Reminder for the CD

Your job during this 10-minute session is to make sure every delegate understands:

1. What the agenda is about.

2. Their responsibility as a country representative.

3. How they are expected to behave.

4. Which languages they may use.

5. How they will participate in the committee.

Be clear, confident, neutral, and professional. You are guiding the committee, not debating on behalf of a country.
